

How to find the most supportive and effective
personal coach of your life

Coaching to create clarity, confidence, and steady resolve

One-on-one work is the fast track for people who are ready for deep and lasting change. You can work alone slowly, work in groups for more support and perspective, and work one-on-one for the most focused attention.

- Be held accountable to your own highest standards.
- Learn the skills and practices you need to succeed.
- Tailor your work directly to your situation.
- Track your progress.

Who has what you need?

Find someone who has accomplished what you're looking for. If you want to get better at relationships—with yourself and with others—look for someone who has done and is continuing the work of self-knowledge, reflection, and development.

Does your coach have the experience and training to teach you the skills you need?

If you're looking to bolster your relationship skills to create clarity, lead compassionately and effectively through change, build resiliency, repair fractures, recognize and affirm difference, develop unity, and ultimately find and bring joy,

Anne can help.

Where are you starting?

A great coach helps you lay out where you're at right now. How will you know you're progressing without a clear baseline? Make sure that your coach helps you identify where you're starting from as you design your plan collaboratively.

All of Anne's private-session work starts with a baseline questionnaire so that you can see where you're at, what's working for you, and where you want to make changes.

Where are you going?

An effective coach is going to help you identify what you want and how to get there. Planning and setting a clear, specific, and actionable intention is crucial.

Working with a life coach should feel revolutionary--at least some of the time. If you're not having significant ah-ha! moments and insights on a regular basis that result in real change in your life—you can do better.

Anne helps you create a clear path forward. Together, we identify patterns that no longer serve you and develop practices to help you create healthier ways to respond to life.

What are you working on?

How is the work showing up on your daily life? Talking about change isn't enough. You must practice and evaluate the learning in your life in order for the changes to bring you closer to your goals.

Your coach should have a rich set of skills, tools, practices, and/or exercises that you are using between sessions to incorporate the learning into your body, your mind, your heart, and your community.

Anne's work is grounded in modern research-informed practice, and an ancient yoga lineage for a holistic approach that works.

What does your gut tell you?

Even if everything looks good on paper, the true test is a gut check: is this the person you want to work with? Check her out in person to see if you're a good fit.

There is no one right person for everyone. Meeting with someone gives you so much information and is the best way to get a sense of if you will work well together. A great coach will give you an opportunity to meet without committing to a contract.

Working with Anne to develop self-knowledge, you begin to understand and trust yourself. Anne requires a free intro session with all potential clients so that we can check in with each other and ourselves about whether we can work together.

Why Anne?

Anne helps you recognize where you're at, where you want to be, and how to get there.

She has a deep reservoir of experience, a strong set of practices, and a powerful way of supporting you to get to your next right thing.

What do clients say?

“Anne’s philosophy focuses on clarifying your own wishes, paying attention to what your body is telling you and taking action (with regular reminders) that allow you to sustain progress. If you’re wondering about re-finding “you,” connect with Metamorphix. I’m grateful I have and expect you will be too. “

“I have worked with numerous people over the years but Anne was, for me, far and away the best practitioner with whom I have worked. I liked that we set and returned to realistic goals, things that allowed me to stay focused on the work and not get lost in my own worry or self-doubt. “

“I had several sessions with Anne and really enjoy her style. [...] I always felt heard and supported. Yet Anne’s questions also challenged me and made me rethink previously held assumptions. Thus, I became more aware of negative behavior patterns and changed them almost immediately. “
